DEPARTURE OF THE MORMONS.

Miss Margaret Johnson Takes Leave of the Others at Sight of her Relatives.

The 682 Mormon converts brought to this country by the steamship Nevada on Sunday fled into Castle Garden yesterday. They had, apparently, been led by the cold breeze of Sunday night to expect winter weather in New York, for all were warmly clad. The women and children especially were carefully protected against a degree of cold that certainly, as the day wore on, was not perceptible in Castle Garden. Many of the new arrivals were soon glad to change their heavy garments for lighter clothing, though Mr. G. F. Goss, who had charge of the band, thought it possible that some of the plainer dressed and the promised land reached were dressed and warm coats could not be found acceptable.

All the morning a young man and a young woman, who had come to New York with the coming of the converts in the Garden. They were expecting their sister, Regina Johnson, a Swedish girl. They were the Mormons, nor did they know that the others should have if they could prevent it. They had journeyed from Philadelphia to meet her, and when they saw a priest, had dressed themselves in woman's attire. The priest, with the other men, threw their arms around her and embraced her warmly. She returned their caresses, burst into tears, and expressed her desire to go home with them at once. Nobody tried to hinder her, and Mr. Johnson and his two sisters started for Philadelphia in the train. The priest explained that Miss Regina had taken umbrage at her father's marrying a second time in secret, and running away, and joined the Mormons, and that she had come to New York, to repeat her rashness before the voyage was half over. She had, fortunately, left a note to say she was well, and expected to get home to her mother.

The party of converts risked going out of the station, and, finding that the trains had all started for the Pavonia ferry, and at 4 o'clock took a train on the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad, and began their journey to the West. Their special cars were provided for them. They will probably reach Utah next Monday.

Charged with Stealing $2,000 Headless.

Agent Jaschinski, who is charged with stealing $2,000 from a safe which was at the police station, was taken before United States Commissioner Osborne yesterday. The Commissioner said that there was no way he could decline to grant bail. It was said that the agent could not be returned to Russia except under the statute giving jurisdiction over fugitives from foreign countries.

Fifty Dollars a Week for Eight Years.

Detective Sergeant Reilly told you, yesterday, to the general sessions James Bryce of 314 West Forty-first street, whom he arrested on the charge of stealing money from his late employer, Henry Ferris & Son, of 267 Broadway. Bryce, after being held to answer, was released on $500, and has been given two weeks after he entered Ferris & Son's employ, and averaged $50 a week.
